It’s a new week, readers! In this edition of Stateline Daily, whether you stayed in bed watching movies or went out on the town with friends, we hope you had a great weekend. Today’s hubby emoji icon is to the left.

Featuring people who are not United States citizens being allowed to vote in statewide or federal elections.

Noncitizens can vote in a handful of local elections in several states, but already are not allowed to vote in statewide or federal elections. New laws that require citizenship verification to vote are aiming to keep noncitizens away from the polls.

Ahead of November’s presidential election, GOP goes big to make it illegal

Though noncitizens can vote in few local elections, Preventing people who are not United States citizens from casting a ballot has reemerged as a focal point in the ongoing Republican drive to safeguard “election integrity,” even though noncitizens are rarely involved in voter fraud, and some argue unfair. A new law signed by Democratic Gov. Janet Mills requires same-day voter registration in the state, despite the objections of key Republicans in the legislature.

WHAT WE'RE READING

FEATURED STORY

Though noncitizens can vote in a few local elections, GOP goes big to make it illegal

MORE STATE NEWS

- Bill would make it illegal in Illinois for K-12 educators to have sexual relations with adult students
- 1. Alex from LA
- 2. Maddy from MA
- 3. Jose from WA
- 4. Em from VT
- 5. Emily from NE
- 6. Virginia from OH
- 7. Elizabeth from MA
- 8. Sarah from HI

HIGHLIGHTS

- Memorial Day cleanup efforts.
- Ohio town asks voters to push lawmakers for property tax relief special session
- Voters may get a say on natural gas in Washington state
- South Dakota, tribes and federal government are working to curb state’s syphilis epidemic
- Despite Big Tech pushback, internet safety bills on track to pass in New York

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

Weekend Recap

A few of our favorites from the past few weeks:

1. Alex from LA
2. Maddy from MA
3. Jose from WA
4. Em from VT
5. Emily from NE
6. Virginia from OH
7. Elizabeth from MA
8. Sarah from HI

Feast your eyes on these stories:

- Memorial Day cleanup efforts.
- Ohio town asks voters to push lawmakers for property tax relief special session
- Voters may get a say on natural gas in Washington state
- South Dakota, tribes and federal government are working to curb state’s syphilis epidemic
- Despite Big Tech pushback, internet safety bills on track to pass in New York

Support one-of-a-kind journalism with a tax-deductible donation to Stateline.

Thanks so much for making Stateline Daily. If you enjoyed today’s newsletter, forward this email to a friend. Happy weekend next week!